This handsome Pulsar watch from the Seiko Corporation features kinetic technology that transforms movement into electricity which is then stored and used to power the watch. The watch has an understated charcoal grey dial, clear hour, minute and second hands, batten and numeric markers and magnified date window. It also has a Lumibrite dial with hands and markers that are charged by light to appear illuminated at night. Water resistant to 30 metres, it has a black padded leather strap with contrasting stitching and a stainless steel screwdown casing.
