Octogenarians Rekindle their Wartime Romance

Stockport A couple forced to part during the Second World War have rekindled their romance after a break of more than 60 years. Maimie Meakin, of Glasgow, was 19 when she fell in love with Frank Walker, two years her senior and an RAF tail-gunner, in 1942 – but her mother put an end to it because she feared her daughter could not cope if he was killed in action. They went their separate ways; both married after the war, and both recently lost their spouses – before Mrs Meakin, 86, tracked Mr Walker down in Stockport. “The spark is still there between us,” said Mr Walker, 88.
