

Waiting is good for you

- 1 IT probably doesn't feel that way when you're standing behind ten others... but waiting is good for you.
- 2 In tests, University of Chicago researchers found that if someone is given a choice of 50 dollars now or waiting weeks for 55 dollars, they would pick the lower amount straight away. 5, if they were given the same option and then given time to think about it, most would hang on for the larger amount.
- 3 Those who waited longer not only gained patience but ultimately made the better decision, according to the findings of the test published in the Journal of Organisational Behaviour and Human Decision Processes. Professor Ayelet Fisbach said: "When people wait, it makes them place a higher value on what they are waiting for, and that higher value makes the experience more worthwhile."

'We'll have to come back later, there's no queue'
